THE WRAP INTERVIEW STUDIO

Live at the INDIEGOGO Lounge

TheWrap is pleased to announce a series of multi-faceted sponsorship and marketing partnerships with national brands at Sundance 2015, including its first-ever live-streamed interview studio with leading talent at the festival.

The live-streamed interview space will be headquartered at the Indiegogo Lounge on Main Street in Park City, where the 10-day festival takes place. TheWrap's reporters will conduct three full days of interviews with the leading actors and directors appearing in competition at the festival.

"We have spent the past several years building high quality events and convening the top talent and thought leaders of the entertainment industry," said Wrap CEO and Editor in Chief Sharon Waxman. "It is really gratifying to see these efforts validated by new partnerships with national brands that are seeking to embrace the future of entertainment. We feel privileged to lead that conversation."

The Buzz is all about "TheBronze"

Buyers will be out in full force this week in Park City but with so many options to choose from, it helps to have a cheat sheet to prioritize the must-see acquisition titles at Sundance. After talking to buyers and sellers alike, here is one of the 10 most promising titles with the loudest buzz heading into this year's festival.

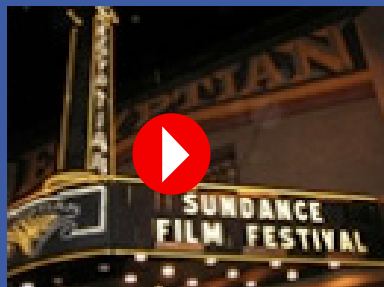

"The Bronze"

What's the Deal?: The highlight of Sundance's opening night lineup is this raunchy comedy from director Bryan Buckley featuring co-writer Melissa Rauch in what could prove to be a star-making performance. The "Big Bang Theory" actress plays a washed-up Olympic gymnast whose local celebrity is threatened by the arrival of a promising young gymnast seeking a mentor. Sundance describes the foul-mouthed protagonist as "a lovably loathsome character who makes Tonya Harding look like Grace Kelly," so perhaps this will be the next "Bad Words?"

First Screening: Thursday, Jan. 22, 9:30 p.m. – Eccles
